UNION, THE CONSTITUTION AND THE LAWS—THE GUARDIANS OF OUR LIBERTIES.

Vol. XLVII.

HILLSBOROUGH, N. C., WEDNESDAY, JANUARY 22, 1868.

No. 24023.

THE TABLES TURNED.

"He's a scoundrel!—a base, heartless, unprincipled scoundrel, and deserves to rot in jail. Don't talk to me about pity and mercy, when he owed me twelve hundred dollars, and hasn't been the man to pay a cent of it. Ought to pity him! Humph!"

"You do wrong, my dear husband, in speaking harshly of Mr. Milton. He is unfortunate, it is true, but honest. No man stood higher in this community than he did, two years ago. You certainly should look more leniently upon the misfortune of a kind neighbor and brother in the church."

"Yes, a great neighbor and church brother he is,—break down and cheat me out of my pay, and after waiting on him so long too. Don't talk to me about brother. I'll have him turned out, see if I don't."

"Supposing you were to have had bad fortune, and become poor, would you like to be denounced as a scoundrel by your neighbor?"

"I always pay my debts. An honest man always pays his debts. Can't trust nobody in these times. I never will sign for a man again as long as I live."

It was in vain that Mrs. Wilson pleaded with her angry husband for the unfortunate debtor. She sadly bowed over her work, and he passed to his store.

William Milton had failed, and the little village was astir with the news of the event. Those who were before his friends now they remembered that they always saw something in the man which was not right—they had expected something of the kind before! He was certainly a dishonest man. And so his old neighbors turned in to give him a kick in his downhill course.

A more honorable, high-souled man than William Milton never lived. He was the soul of honor. His heart, hand, home and purse were always open, and many were the good deeds on record in his favor. Not had all in his neighborhood forgotten his past goodness. While business men turned to rend him, there were poor people who deserted not.

Milton was a crushed man. Misfortunes had come thick upon him, and his strong spirit at last gave way. His lovely wife had died, and lay in her grave, with her youngest child upon her breast. His son, a promising child of ten summers, had died a few weeks after the mother. His shop had caught fire about the same time and burned up. Sickness came on to paralyze the strong arm, and when Milton again stood on his feet, everything was a wreck. His well-to-do neighbor shunned him as though there were contagion in his presence, and debts came upon him to finish what sickness had so sweepingly commenced.

On the morning of the conversation at the head of this, he had asked employment as a journeyman, and had been tauntingly refused. He now sat in his house, his great heart swelling with bitterness and dark with gloom. He involuntarily cast his eyes about as if looking for a familiar counselor; his lip quivered a moment, and a tear dropped from his cheek. The wife and two loved ones had passed away, and but one of his little flock was left him. While he was sitting dreamily by his hearth, the door opened, and a ragged form half entered the room; and stood looking hesitatingly at him. And then by a sudden impulse, the boy went up to where Milton was, and put a paper in his half open palm, quickly disappearing through the door into the street. Milton opened the paper, and a half dollar dropped upon the floor. Milton read:

"You have clothed and fed the needy; you have been good to the widow and fatherless. Accept the widow's mite in the hour of your trouble."

The paper trembled in Milton's hands, and he bowed his head and wept. Then lifting his form proudly, he arose and strode restlessly backward and forward through the room. "No! thank God, they are not all against me—not all. The poor remember me." The bankrupt was happier, and had again faith in humanity.

The creditors made short work with Milton's affairs; for poverty finds little mercy. His household effects did not bear pay off the demands against him. After all had gone under the hammer, the remorseless debtor law came in and attached the body, and the high-souled Milton was taken to the debtor's cell. His daughter followed him, and as her pale and wasting features passed through the streets, the light word was hushed, and the more feeling yielded a tear for the late of the family. It was at the instigation of Wilson that Milton had been arrested and imprisoned. When his wife told him of the pale faced daughter, and how sad she looked as she went to the cell, a sickening sensation crept into the merchant's heart. But he was too proud to acknowledge his wrong. The law was with him, and he would not relax.

Six months wore away, and the case of Milton was seldom spoken of. His daughter sickened and died in jail, and for the first time since his imprisonment, he was taken out to attend her funeral. As Wilson looked upon his old neighbor, at the grave, he half made up his mind to forgive his debt. But he feared to retrace the step he had taken. Milton had not asked any favors of him, and he had no reason to expect clemency! Had the debtor sued for clemency, the merchant would have taken great credit in opening his prison doors.

When Milton first came into the village, there was an orphan boy, wild, uncared for, and singularly vicious, the dread of all the neighborhood. For some petty act laid to him, he was sent to jail. Milton was jailer, and being a keen judge of human nature soon found that the boy had been more sinued against than sinning. Putting money into the orphan's hands, and a letter to a friend in New Orleans, Milton unlocked the jail door and bid his prisoner good bye. Fifteen years had passed since then.

One summer afternoon, Milton sat in his cell, his face buried in his hands, and his broken spirit wrapped in gloomy thoughts. The door was slowly opened, and a stranger stood looking upon the prisoner. The stranger was of noble form and man, his features swarthy but handsome, and his apparel of the richest material. Milton stirred not, supposing the jailer stood before him.

"William Milton!"

The prisoner started at the sound of the strange voice, and looked vacantly upon the visitor.

"You have forgotten me, Milton!"

"I know you not," mechanically answered Milton.

With a quick movement, the stranger stepped forward and knelt upon the floor, and clasped the prisoner's hands, kissing them again and again.

"Don't know me! and yet for fifteen years no waking hour has passed that I have not thought of you as my earthly saviour. From this same cell you once led me forth, and gave me money and your blessing. I have come a long journey to see and bless my saviour and weep upon his neck. I am rich! William Milton—do you hear that? I am rich! As you helped the orphan, and opened his prison doors, so shall the orphan now do by you. I am 'Ugly Mark'—Mark Douglass!"

Milton's eyes were streaming with tears for such gratitude and such words had been strangers to him for many a year. Hope, faith, ambition, again sprung up in the despairing debtor's heart, and he bowed his head upon the broad shoulder of the poor orphan, and sobbed like a child. Awhile the two lingered and talked in the begrimed cell, and then passed out arm in arm.

There was astonishment in the village when they recognized the forgotten William Milton leaning upon the arm of the distinguished looking stranger. The prisoner's hair had grown gray in the last years of his imprisonment, and his manly form had lost some of its vigor and fullness.

Mark Douglass and Milton entered Wilson's store, and the former pulled his purse from his pocket, and threw the sum, as agreed upon before he entered the jail, contemptuously upon the counter. Then bending his black eye upon the merchant he slowly said:

"You once sent an orphan to jail when he was guiltless of wrong or of crime. Again, you sent an old neighbor to jail for no crime but poverty. They both stand before you. And should misfortunes ever come upon you, James Wilson, may you find others more humane and forgiving than you have been. This is a world of changes, and disease and bad luck may waste you in such an hour as you know not."

A paleness crept over Wilson's face, and before he could reply, Douglass and Milton had passed from his store.

Ten years later, and two of the characters of our story are again brought together. A change has been wrought in the affairs of James Wilson, the rich village merchant. Disease has been in his household, and his store and dwelling have been laid in ashes. Financial reverses followed in quick succession, until all his property was swept away, and he found himself several thousand dollars in debt. Driven to desperation, and struggling to save his falling fortunes, he attempted to secrete a portion of his means by the aid of a friend. The scheme was detected, and he was arrested on charge of swindling, and sent to prison. It was then the ruined man learned the bitterness of poverty and desertion. Not a friend would be his bail. The fickle populace turned against him as quickly as they had against William Milton years before. He complained of this bitterly—he could not see why his old friends should desert him because he was unfortunate—surely that was no crime. So reasoned the man who sent Milton to the debtor's cell. His integrity had not passed the ordeal as untarnished as did that of his early friend.

Dark and gloomy were the days between the arrest and the trial. Wilson had little to hope from the magnanimity of the prosecuting attorney, as that official had been rejected by one of his daughters on account of the attorney's poverty. From the prisoner's box, Wilson looked in vain for friends in the sea of faces. He had lost his property and had no friends.

To the inquiry of the Court who would defend him, Wilson answered that he had retained none, his face burning as he answered, for he had no means to employ counsel. One and another of the lawyers in the bar plead prior engagements, and begged to be excused from acting as Wilson's counsel at the request of the Court. This marked reluctance to defend him, stung the prisoner keenly, and he bit his lip until it bled. Any one of the brood, a month before, would have most eagerly performed any service for the wealthy merchant.

At this juncture, a tall and muscular gentleman strode up to the bar and tendered his service as counsel for the prisoner at the bar. The stranger's head was gray, but his presence was singularly noble and commanding, and his eye full and lustrous. The finely chiseled mouth told its own story of daring, firmness and iron will. The prosecuting attorney looked a little blank as the distinguished looking gentleman took his seat within the bar and answered for his client. The interest in the audience became intense, for they expected something from so fine a looking man. And the presence of that personage—his lofty bearing and eagle eye—was already making interest for his astonished client.

The trial proceeded. The counsel for the defence asked few questions of the witnesses, contenting himself with playing with his penknife, now and then looking upon those who swore "swift." There was a terror in his very eye, and the swift witnesses quailed as they read his scornful glance. The District Attorney indulged in frequent coarse and aggravating remarks as the testimony proceeded.

The plea of the stranger was a most finished specimen of logic, irony and pathos. The tide of feeling in the people, re-acted under his eloquence, and rushed again to the merchant. A few words, calm, but most fearfully withering, crushed the prosecuting attorney's attempt to wound the unfortunate. "The testimony was picked and torn in a thousand shreds, and strong men blushed that they had ever doubted the honesty of the prisoner."

"You are but men," said he to the jury, "with the same frail nature of him whose honor you now have in your hands. You know not your own strength. In prosperity it is no hard matter to present a clean sheet to the world. It is adversity that tests men. The strongest among you might fall, were misfortune to come upon you. Misfortune or prosperity is no virtue. Summer weather friends are they who bask in a man's favor to-day, and when a dark hour comes upon him, turn to heap opprobrium upon his name. As men need mercy at the hands of Him who wept over and forgave the sins of men, so let them remember mercy, when judging each other. Should either of you, gentlemen, by any reverse of fortune, ever become poor and a subject for the debtor's cell, and see your professed friends desert or turn against you, you will experience one of life's bitterest lessons, and learn how cruel is the hand which crushes and brands with shame, the name of the poor and unfortunate. God is the avowed friend of such, and men should be careful how they are less forgiving than our common Father."

The manner of the stranger was intensely thrilling, and carried the multitude for his client. The prosecuting attorney writhed in his seat, and in his plea blundered continually. He grew feverish and annoyed under the full gaze of his powerful antagonist.

The jury returned a verdict of "not guilty" without leaving their seats, and the sheriff was ordered to release to prisoner from custody. And what a change in the manner of the people! All were eager to take him by the hand and to congratulate him upon his acquittal. They were friends again! And yet Wilson could not shut out the reflection that, had he been convicted, the same men would as heartily have approved the verdict as now.

With a heart too full for utterance, Wilson attempted to thank his stranger friend. While he held that individual's hand, pouring out his broken thanks, the sheriff again arrested him for debt. The District Attorney had been foiled on the criminal suit, and now determined to have revenge at last.

"Hold a moment, said the stranger counsel. "How much is claimed of my client?"

"Some three thousand dollars," sneeringly answered the attorney.

"Make out your papers, sir, and you can have your money."

The abashed officer proceeded to do so, while the crowd gathered and looked on. The stranger, from a heavy purse, counted out the amount in bills and gold, and then handed the receipts to the bewildered Wilson; afterwards lifting his hat politely to the people and passing away.

But the overpowered Wilson could not be left thus. He followed his deliverer and persisted in knowing who he was.

"James Wilson!" replied the stranger, in a sad but thrilling tone. "you have fallen as others have fallen. This is a world of changes. While visiting the graves where my loved ones are, I learned of your reverses and the charge against you. Fifteen years ago there was another poor debtor sent to jail for no crime, and his child died there. You sent him there. He was poor and you oppressed him. He was sick and in prison and you visited him not. Never again, Mr. Wilson, forget the 'golden rule' of the Master you serve, or oppress the poor and unfortunate. The poor debtor of fifteen years ago, owed you. You now owe him. William Milton has returned good for evil. You will not hate him as you once did, will you, Mr. Wilson? and a sweet smile shone through the tears on the stranger's face.

"William Milton! God forgive me. And you are him?"

"Yes, the once poor debtor, but now rich man, is before you. Go home to your family, Mr. Wilson, and be kind to all. We all need kindness and forgiveness."

While the tears were streaming fast from Wilson's face, the stranger passed rapidly away and disappeared. The poor merchant returned to his home a better and wiser man. Coals had been heaped upon his back, and from that day to the close of a long life, James Wilson never forgot to do good. At night and in the morning he invoked blessings upon his head, and in kindly deeds to the poor and needy, endeared himself to all.

The tables were turned to his good.

JOHN BILLINGS.

Joshua Billings, Esq., has turned up with the following "monographs":

The Jealous Man is always a hunting.

He is always a hunting for something that he has. These tellers don't believe in spooks, and yet they are about the only folks who ever seen enny. A jealous man is always happy jist in proportion az he is miserable.

Jealousy is a disease, and it is a good deal like sea-sickness—dreadful sick and vomit.

The Anonymous Man boards at red tavern, and pays for his board by tending bar occasionally. He ain't got no more karakter than the jack of spades has when he ain't trumps.

He is loofer bi professhun, without enny vices.

He rides on the box wunce in a while with the driver, and nobody thinks of asking for his stage fare.

He sprung from a respectable family; his grand father wuz a jistic ov the peace; but he haz not vanity enuff to brag about it.

The Stiff Man looks down when he walks upon folks. He dosen't seem tew have but one limber jint in him, and that iz located in his nose.

He iz generally loaded with wisdom clear up tew the muzzle, and when he goes oph makes a noise like a kannon, but don't dew enny damage.

I hav seen him fire into a crowd and miss every man.

As a general thing stiff men git mad dreadful easy, and hav to git over it dreadful easy, becase folks ain't apt tew git a big skare at what they ain't afraid ov.

Stiff man had grandfather once who went to Kongress from our district, and there ain't one in the whole family that has been able tew git limber since.

The Model Man never disturbs a hen when she iz setting; never speaks cross tew a lost dog; always puts a five cent shipplaster in his vest pocket late Saturday mite tew have it ready Sunday morning for the church platter; rizes whenever a lady enters the street kars; remembers yone uncle plainly and asks after awl the family. If he steps on a kot's tale, he iz sure tew do it light, and unobjektly asks her pardon; reads the Phunny Phellow, and laff becase he can't help it; hooks up his wife's dresses, and plays hoos with the children. Never meddles with the milk in the milk pans; goes easily over errands and cums back in season; attends every body's phuneral; can alwuz tell when the moon changes; thinks jist az yu do, and follows every body's advice but his own; practices lead snout ov the vutews without knowing it; the life of a shorn lamb; gets sick after a while and dies az soon az he kan to save making enny further trouble.

A Washington correspondent of the Cincinnati Gazette says that the opinion is gaining ground there that the President has been "underrated." It is by no means so fashionable as it was a year ago to denounce him as utterly incompetent and powerless. We think it not at all unlikely that this mistake has been made. President Johnson's messages and other state papers will compare favorably, in point of ability, force, and effectiveness, with those of any President we have ever had; and the steady determination with which he has adhered to his original policy is beginning to have an effect even upon those who dissent most widely from it. Wednesday, Jan. 23, 1868.

STATE CONVENTION.

The Convention assembled at the capitol in the city of Raleigh on Tuesday the 14th instant, in conformity with the order of Gen. Canby, and was organized on Wednesday by the election of Calvin J. Cowles, Esq., of Wilkes, as President; T. A. Byrnes of Cumberland, Principal Secretary; John H. Boner of Forsythe, Assistant Secretary; James H. Jones, (colored,) of Wake, Principal Doorkeeper, and J. T. Ball, of Wake, Assistant Doorkeeper.

On Thursday, a resolution was adopted, authorizing the President of the Convention to invite the Ministers of the Gospel of the city to open the sessions daily with prayer.

The President announced the following committees. On the best method of proceeding to form a Constitution: Messrs. Nicholson, Jones, of Washington, Heaton, Rodman, Dowd, Harris, of Wake, Tourgee, Cox, Abbott, Hood, Forkner, Hobbs, Jones, of Caldwell, Bradley, Gabagan and Garrett.

On rules of order, Messrs. Sweet, Galloway, Pool, Graham, of Orange, and Fullings.

Mr. Abbott presented the following resolution:

Resolved, That no Reporter for any newspaper be allowed upon this floor, who treats the Convention, or any of its members, with any disrespect, but that they shall, in case of offence in this respect, be excluded from the floor of the Hall and from the galleries.

After considerable debate the resolution was adopted by a vote of 57 to 18. The principal offence which produced this action appears to have been the use of the word "negro" after the name of colored delegates.

On Friday, J. W. Peck, of Wilmington, was elected Sergeant at arms.

Rules for the government of the Convention were reported from the select committee, and adopted.

A resolution was adopted, that no person, except members and officers of the Convention, be allowed to come upon the floor, except by invitation of one of the members of the Convention.

The committee appointed to consider the best mode of proceeding to frame a Constitution made a report, which was ordered to be printed.

Mr. Forkner submitted a resolution directing the Secretary of State to furnish each delegate of this Convention with a copy of the Constitution adopted by the Convention of 1865 and '66.

On motion of Mr. Tourgee the words "the Secretary of State" were stricken out, and "Provisional Secretary of State" inserted.

At the suggestion of J. W. Hood, (colored,) the secretary was "requested" instead of "directed" to furnish the copies, in which shape the resolution passed.

CONGRESS.—In the House on Wednesday the Committee on Public Lands reported adversely to giving the public lands to negroes under the Homestead law.

The Reconstruction bill being under consideration, Mr. Butler gave notice of an amendment, declaring all the State offices vacant, authorizing the Convention to fill them, and making it the duty of the District Commanders to confirm and install the Convention appointees.

The anti contraction bill was passed with a verbal amendment by 23 to 4.

ATTEMPTED ESCAPE OF PRISONERS.—There are, we are informed, eight prisoners confined in the jail at this place, one white and seven blacks. On yesterday morning, when Mr. Blackwood, the jailer, went in to give them their breakfast, having opened for some purpose, when two of the prisoners seized hold of Mr. Blackwood and attempted to take from him the keeper which was in his hand, when a third one seized another keeper, which is an iron bar one inch square and about two feet long, and raised it to strike Mr. Blackwood on the head, when Mr. George W. Bruce, who providentially happened to be immediately at his back, seized his arm and arrested the blow, which if inflicted could scarce have failed of being fatal. Being thus foiled they rushed back into the cage and the door was made fast. To prevent another attempt of the kind, fetters have been put in use.

OHIO SENATOR.—The Hon. Allen G. Thurman, the Democratic candidate, has been elected a United States Senator by the Legislature of Ohio, to succeed R. F. Wate, whose term will expire on the 4th of March 1869. The vote in the Senate stood: Thurman 19, Wade 18; in the House, Thurman 55, Wade 49. Judge Thurman is represented to be a lawyer of great ability and high personal character, and as having been for the last thirty years a prominent champion of the Democratic party in Ohio.

MARYLAND.—Hon. W. T. Hamilton has been elected United States Senator by the Legislature of Maryland.

THE RALEIGH STANDARD is now issued daily, and contains a full report of the proceedings of the State Convention.

THE DAILY PRESS, is the name of a new daily paper, which made its first appearance in the city of Raleigh on Wednesday last, (a successor to the Progress.) It is published by an association of Printers, and edited by Quenton Busbee and Charles M. Busbee. It presents a good appearance, and its columns are well filled. The price $6 for a year, or $1.50 for six months.

It is stated that the Democrats in Ohio have matured a plan, in redistricting the State, by which only two Radical members will be returned to the next Congress.

Washington, Jan. 13.—The Senate adjourned from Thursday till Monday. It is almost certain that bills changing the Supreme Court and degrading Hancock will fail by two-thirds in the Senate.

Senator Anthony's paper opposes the emasculation, and letters from soldiers in all parts of the country are pouring in protesting against the degradation.

The bill impairing the army by mustering out Hancock will probably die in the House.

Mr. Green, of the Boston Post, telegraphs his correspondent here that the excitement throughout New England is intense.

THE LIFE OF JEFFERSON DAVIS.

By Frank H. Alfriend, Richmond, Va., late Editor of The Southern Literary Messenger, and well known from his editorial connection—both during and since the war—with the Richmond press.

To be issued in one handsome Octavo Volume, of from 500 to 600 pages, embellished with a portrait on steel, engraved in pure line and stipple, by Buttre, from a recent photograph from life.

Price, bound in the best English Morocco cloth, $3.50, per copy; bound in half-calf antique, $5.00 per copy.

The above work is now far advanced in its preparation, and will be published at an early date. It will be sold exclusively by subscription, and a Bound Prospectus is now ready for Agents.

In the collection of materials the author has had the co-operation and assistance of prominent officials of very high position in the late Confederacy, and has enjoyed facilities unsurpassed by any writer upon the subject of the war, for obtaining information from original sources.

The work will form a full, complete, and authentic Biography of Mr. Davis, embracing the whole period of his life, and will shed much needed light upon many important subjects connected with the late war, which have never been understood—or, at best, but imperfectly so—because the facts necessary to the elucidation have remained inaccessible to all previous writers.

That such a work will be looked for with eager interest, and that it is certain to prove one of the most rapidly selling books ever published must be evident to all.

The work will be issued by the National Publishing Company, 917 Main street, Richmond, Va., to whom all orders should at once be forwarded.

A child of Hugh Ward, in Jersey City, during the momentary absence of its mother, commenced lighting pieces of paper at the stove, and while so engaged his dress caught fire, and in an instant he was wrapped in flames. Attracted by the screams of the child, the mother rushed in only to see it struggling in the most excruciating manner on the floor. Wrapping it up in a blanket, she was enabled to smother the torturing flames, but not until the little sufferer was so fearfully blistered that it died the next morning.

A party of colored people passed over the Seaboard Railroad on Wednesday, en route for Winconsin via Cincinnati. Among the party were two good looking white women who had black husbands and several half-breed children. They were from Guilford county, N. C., and the white women are said to be the daughters of an Englishman who settled near the gold mines some years ago.

London, Dec. 26.—Despatches received from Naples mention that the eruption of Mount Vesuvius is continually increasing in power and splendor. Immense sheets of white, yellow and crimson flame arise hundreds of feet above the crater, and at night the Bay of Naples is lighted up for miles. Lava is pouring down the mountain side in immense quantities, and large stones are occasionally thrown out from the mouth of the volcano. A deep rumble, like reverberating thunder, is heard from time to time as in the bowels of the earth, and many of the people in the vicinity have left their homes, fearing an earthquake or other calamity. No such eruption has probably occurred in Vesuvius for centuries; and the spectacle is regarded as one of the most magnificent and sublime ever witnessed in nature.

FIRE IN FAYETTEVILLE.—The store of Dr. J. F. Foulkes, in Fayetteville, was destroyed by fire on Friday evening the 10th inst., together with his valuable stock of goods. Much of the stock of Messrs. J. D. Kyle & Co., and Mr. A. R. Carver, adjoining, was also destroyed. The burned building was owned by James Kyle, Esq., and was not insured. Dr. Foulkes' stock was valued at $14,000 and was insured for $8,000. Messrs. Kyle & Co. were insured for $10,000 in the Home and Underwriters, both Northern Companies, and had in store a stock of at least $32,000 and more, of which they saved, in damaged and all, not more than $2,000 worth. The building occupied by Mr. Carver was not burned, but his loss was heavy from damage and breakage, estimated to be at least $9,000. The News says that this is a heavy blow to the property owners, besides a serious loss to the community.

Government disbursements for December—civil lists, $4,750,000; interest on public debt $9,250,000; war $13,000,000; navy $3,500,000; interior $1,000,000. Total $30,000,000.

Obituary.

Departed this life, in Person county, N. C., on the 3rd instant, Mrs. MARY E. DAVIS, wife of Mr. Asa N. Davis, and eldest daughter of Charles S. and Nancy C. Warren, in the 39th year of her age. Mrs. Davis embraced religion and joined the M. E. Church at the early age of fifteen, and lived a consistent member until called from the scenes of mortal life to her final home in the better land. Having the advantages of early religious training, and being endowed with good natural mind, her piety was uniform and consistent, proceeding from clear convictions of duty and a firm faith in the redemption of Christ. For ten months she suffered from a lingering illness which baffled medical skill, and finally terminated her earthly existence. During her illness she expressed perfect resignation to the will of God; and in her last moments gave evidence that with her "to die was gain." She has left a kind husband and seven children, besides a large circle of relations and friends, to mourn her death. They mourn not, however, as those who have no hope, for they believe "Jesus died and rose again," and that "those who sleep in Jesus will God bring with Him."

The little children will miss the genial influence of "mother," for "God gives us but one mother." It is to be hoped, however, that in answer to the prayers of the sainted dead, offered on her sick bed, God will provide them friends and counsellors who will not fail to teach them to follow her as she "also followed Christ." And when the dark and gloomy days of this life are all passed away, may her numerous relations meet her where death never comes, and where loved ones never part.

SCIENTIFIC AMERICAN.

THE BEST PAPER IN THE WORLD.

Published for nearly

A QUARTER OF A CENTURY.

This Splendid Newspaper, greatly enlarged and improved, is one of the most reliable, useful, and interesting journals ever published. Every number is beautifully printed and elegantly illustrated with several Original Engravings, representing New Inventions, Novelties in Mechanics, Agriculture, Chemistry, Photography, Manufactures, Engineering, Science and Art.

Farmers, Mechanics, Inventors, Engineers, Chemists, Manufacturers, people in every profession of life, will find the Scientific American to be of great value in their respective callings. Its counsels and suggestions will save them hundreds of Dollars annually, besides affording them a continual source of knowledge, the value of which is beyond pecuniary estimate. All patents granted, with the claims, published weekly.

Every Public or Private library should have the work bound and preserved for reference.

The yearly numbers of the Scientific American make a splendid volume of nearly one thousand quarto pages, equivalent to nearly four thousand ordinary book pages. A New Volume commences January 1, 1868. Published Weekly. Terms: One Year, $3; Half Year, $1.50; Clubs of Ten Copies for One Year, $25; Specimen Copies sent gratis.

Address

MUNN & CO.,

37 Park Row, New York.

The Publishers of the Scientific American, in connection with the publication of the paper, have acted as Solicitors of Patents for twenty-two years. Thirty Thousand applications for Patents have been made through their Agency. More than One Hundred Thousand Inventors have sought the counsel of the Proprietors of the Scientific American concerning their inventions. Consultations and advice to inventors, by mail, free. Pamphlets concerning Patent Laws of Countries, free.

A Handsome Bound Volume, containing 150 Mechanical Engravings, and the United States Census by Counties, with Hints and Receipts for Mechanics, mailed on receipt of 25c.

FURNITURE! FURNITURE!!

WHY spend your money for Northern Furniture, when you can be so well supplied, and on such reasonable terms, by calling on the undersigned at his WARE ROOM on Wake Street, between King and Tryon, in Hillsborough, N. C.

Kept on hand, and made to order, Bureaus, Bed Steads, Tables, Chairs, Wardrobes, Washstands, Libraries, Desks, &c. &c.

The very best Mattresses, to which can be used Tucker's celebrated Spring bottom bed.

Upholstering done to order, with neatness and dispatch. Gilt Moulding for picture frames on hand. Walnut Coffins from the finest French polish, to North Carolina Pine, kept and fitted up at short notice.

My house has been repainted and retimbered, and burials in town and country attended to.

Repairing of all kinds done on liberal terms. Seats put in old chairs in a neat and cheap manner. Letters of inquiry promptly answered, and orders by mail, when accompanied with the cash, immediately filled.

Encourage home industry. My terms are made rate, as I work on the live and let live principle. Give me a call.

"MILTON CHRONICLE"

Intending to dissolve my connection with the "DANVILLE TIMES" I embrace this method of announcing my purpose to resume the publication of that old and popular journal, the "MILTON CHRONICLE," in Jan. 1868. Persons wishing to subscribe are requested to forward their names to Milton, N. C. The price of the paper will be $1.50 for six months, or $3 per annum—payable on receipt of the first number, in currency or provisions.

Advertisers will find this paper one of the best advertising mediums in the up Country, and if the business men in Danville, Richmond, Petersburg, Norfolk, Baltimore and N. York city, want the use of Printer's ink that will pay, let them

ADVERTISE IN THE MILTON CHRONICLE.

I want 1000 subscribers for a start. Caswell, famed for her yellow leaf tobacco, her intelligence, wealth and pretty girls, will furnish five hundred of this number, and Person, no less famed, will roll up 300. Halifax, Va., Granville, Orange, Alamance, and Rockingham, N. C., will more than make up the balance—and Old Pennsylvania will "run the measure over." Forward your names, friends and let all who wish to advertise send along their advertisements.

A Letter from "JESSE HOLMES, The Fool Killer," will be published monthly.

Address me at Milton, N. C.

C. N. B. EVANS.

Brethren of the press will very much oblige me by noticing.
